Scholarly networks

Project Network: Institutions and Institutional Change in Postsocialism

Focus: "Institutions and Institutional Change in Postsocialism: Between History and Global Adaptation Pressures" are the themes of a multidisciplinary research network that has been established by eight German universities and research institutes in early 2010. Focusing on the successor states of the former Soviet Union, the network studies (1) how political, economic, legal and cultural institutions are created and changed in a context of historical legacies and global integration and (2) how political actors interpret and reframe institutional accounts, such as ideas of legitimate order and authority, to realise their interests and legitimize their intentions. The network is envisaged to contribute to renewing East European area studies in Germany as a field where different disciplines engage in productive scholarly exchanges. Multidisciplinary communication is a key aim of the network: Social scientists who seek to explain the emergence and change of institutions are provided with opportunities to learn more about cultural and historical contexts. Area specialists socialized in the humanities are offered conceptual perspectives that allow interpreting historically or culturally specific phenomena from a systematic and comparative perspective. Thus, the network enables researchers to get acquainted with the state of the art in neighbouring disciplines. All network projects use qualitative methods of research, relying on case studies, small-n comparisons and contextualized data.

Foreign-origin population: social networks in the context of second demographic transition

Focus: The main aim of the grant application is to elaborate the role of the social networks in the emerging innovative demographic behaviour patterns in the second demographic transition framework. The focus is on interactions of social networks with demographic processes of foreign origin population of Estonia. The application relies mainly on the nation-wide surveys in Estonia like Estonian Family and Fertility Survey (FFS/GGS) 1st and 2nd round, Estonian Health Interview Survey 1996 and 2006, enabling close international cooperation and comparisons in Europe. Collaboration is foreseen also in newly developed research networks with the Nordic countries through REMESO, Linnköping University on SOCTIES research proposal and in cooperation with Estonian relevant institutions on possibilities to implement SHARE in Estonia. Concentration is put on the interactions of the social networks and demographic processes in the phase of second demographic transition in three following domains: (1) Differentials of economic activity of foreign origin population and the impact of social networks in 1st and 2nd generation; (2) Interrelations of social networks and immigrant population health; (3) Social networks in ageing process and the impact of immigrant population on acceleration of the process. Dissemination of the project results is foreseen through submitting papers to the international conferences (IUSSP; EAPS; Nordic Symposium of Demography), participating in activities of international doctoral schools (REMESO; EDSO), submission of papers in both international and Estonian journals and contributing to monographs, issued through international cooperation.
