

easy_social_sciences is an interdisciplinary transfer journal that addresses the social sciences in their entire breadth. The journal's focus is on empirical social research. We publish only digitally and open access, with each quality-checked article giving our readers a quick and easy-to-understand insight into relevant research on societal issues.

Please take note of the following principles that serve as the basis for the relationship between easy and the author”.

1. The contributions submitted are expected to be original pieces of research that have not been previously published or submitted to another journal for publication. Versions of articles already published or submitted elsewhere that have been rewritten for a broader audience are very welcome.
2. The author confirms that the contribution is free from third party rights. It is the responsibility of the author, not of the easy team, to obtain permission to use any previously published and/or copyrighted material (e.g., photos, maps, tables).
3. No liability is accepted for unsolicited manuscripts; no claim may be made for unsolicited manuscripts to be reviewed.
4. By submitting, the author transfers to easy – with no restrictions regarding space and time – the right to duplicate and distribute the work, and the right to make the work accessible to the journal's users. This right is given as exclusive for the duration of 12 months following publication. Twelve months following publication, authors may grant non-exclusive rights of use to third parties with reference to the original place of publication.
5. With regard to Item 4, the author grants easy the rights of use for all publication forms including: print, digital, on storage media, or online use in or from storage media, particularly databases. This includes a) electronic storing, b) the public availability of the contribution including: providing the opportunity to download the contribution, making the publication accessible to the general public, allowing authorized third parties and the general public to access the contribution on-screen, or to store or print the contribution, c) for the indexing and coverage by those specialized information and documentation services and online databases, easy grants non-exclusive rights of use (e.g., SSOAR with Creative Commons License CC-BY 4.0). The author also grants easy the rights for d) reprints, e) abstracts (also for the translation into other languages, in either pre-print or digital form), f) special editions of easy, g) photomechanical copying including telecopies, microcopies, microfiches, and microform copies, h) recorded image and sound recording carriers of all kinds, and i) utilization in e-commerce (this all includes possible master illustrations, drawings, plans, maps, layouts, and charts).
6. Immediately after the publication of the contribution, authors have the right to upload the published easy version on their institutional website or on academic social networks such as academia.edu or researchgate.com. This presupposes, however, that the contribution will neither be sold nor distributed commercially in any way. When the author chooses to upload his or her contribution onto academic social networks or an institutional homepage, the original place of publication must be referenced.
7. After the contribution has been published in easy, reprints are possible with the permission of the easy team and a reference to the original place of publication.