

The Cooperation Effect

Explaining the intensity of terror attacks by networked interaction

Anna-Lena Hönig and Julia Semmelbeck
University of Mannheim
Graduate School of Economic and Social Sciences

How can we explain variation in the material resource intensity of terror attacks?

cooperation

intensity of terror attacks

- Cooperation is rare, but crucial to conduct attacks with high intensity
- Direct tries explain high intensity best in attacks with cooperation

